California AB1953 & Vermont Act 193

Both laws mandate that by January 1, 2010 the weighted average lead content in pipes, fittings and fixtures used to convey drinking water cannot exceed .25% on wetted surfaces.

Explain this new legislation.

In official terms, this legislation prohibits the sale of plumbing fixtures with a wetted surface containing more than a weighted average of .25% lead. Basically, the law virtually eliminates the lead content of pipes, pipe fittings or plumbing fittings and fixtures intended to convey or dispense water for drinking or cooking. The law is effective January 1, 2010 in California and Vermont.

How will the legislation affect you?

You must comply – it is the law. The laws prohibit the sale and installation of any pipe, pipe fitting or plumbing fitting that is not “lead free” on January 1, 2010. Non-compliant inventory is not grandfathered for continued use in California or Vermont.
